alaska!

Frontier on the Pacific...the 49th state and the largest. The southeast, a rugged poetry of mountains thrusting from the surf. Deep fjords extending far inland among the peaks. Blue-green glaciers, flowing down from mountain ice fields to reach the sea, where waves undermine the advancing wall to break off floating cliffs of ice. Along the shore Indian villages and fishing towns welcome visitors to feast on salmon baked on the beach. South East Alaska is known to Alaskans as the banana belt due to its relatively warm winters. Behind the lofty Alaska range where Mt. McKinley soars to 20,270 ft. is a land of hot summers and cold winters where temperatures of 60 below zero are not uncommon. This is Seward's ice box containing gold and timber, fascinating wilderness posts and the modern city of Fairbanks. Beyond is the heart of Alaska, the tundra, the deepfreeze world of the Arctic. Then Point Barrow, Alaska's northern-most city at the top of the world. Between May 11th and August 2nd there is almost 24 hours of day light. During this period the sun never sets at Pt. Barrow. From June 6th to June 28th the flowers in Alaska are at their best; fewer days of rain and summer is at its peak with temperatures generally at its warmest. Temperatures vary little, however, from the first of May through the month of August. Autumn sets in early and travel in September is comfortable in daytime hours with a radiance of color as foliage begins to turn. Alaska! A land of hospitality in the lusty flavor of the past. Nowhere is "welcome" more warmly extended.
